SUCCESS OF RACING DEPENDS ON CLUBS

By J. W. MARCHBANK

With Tanforan racing on it is interesting to look around to see what may be in store for the fall and winter in this part of the country. One thing is certain—the people are strong for the game—and it is up to the associations to bend every effort to place the accent where it belongs. My readers are well aware of my position; all I want to do is to furnish the best of sport without allowing extraneous watters to obtrude themselves to mar the effect.

The races belong to the people and to the people solely. An exalted ego may be all right in a commercial organization trying to make a million dollars, but it would be hard to imagine any enterprise in which it is more out of place than on a race track. As an English nobleman put it a long time ago: all men are equal on the turf and under it.

Obfuscating sport with personal ambitions is one of the worst things that could happen. Not so long ago I read in the racing papers that the sport had taken a great hold in one of the southern states. The statement itself was not sufficient. The name of a racing official had to be lugged in, as it is in nearly all of the yarns sent out by some publicity departments. A prominent stable planned to ship south, and once more the same racing official had to be mentioned.

With the decision of A. K. Macomber to sell Mira Monte Stock Farm a good opportunity is given to men new in the game to acquire a nursery establishment of about ninety acres, with a mile track. It was thought at one time Macomber might start up breeding down at the San Jose place, but it appears there is no possibility of it. He has decided, according to reliable report, to confine his activities to Europe.

Norman W. Church, who has been leasing Mira Monte from Macomber year by year, is thinking of having his Maryland string shipped to Tanforan in a couple of weeks. The Church horses in training are now campaigned in two divisions, one at Laurel by "Woody" Fitzgerald and the other at Tanforan by my trainer, Kay Spence. In the Eastern band are such good ones as Riskulus, Toro Nancy, Toro Fight and Proclivity.

POLO GAMES TO FURNISH THRILL TO FIESTA PATRONS

Fast polo matches will be a major attraction of the San Mateo County Fiesta to be held at Bay Meadows October 11, 12 and 13. Some of the best players in the state will take part, with the additional novelty of a womens' polo match following the tournament games. The San Mateo Team, made up of (1) Warren Hellman, (2) Harold Anderson, (3) William Tevis, Captain, (4) Charles Christin, will play a Salinas team made up of (1) Gene Hardin, (2) Harold Lane, (3) Richard Collins, Captain, (4) Tom Matthews.

Eric Tyrell-Martin who recently returned from Meadowbrook, where he played on the British team which made the finals and lost the tournament by only one goal, will referee.

It is possible that another San Mateo team may challenge the first named group to a play off prior to the Fiesta, the winning team playing the Salinas visitors.

The other San Mateo team consists of William Gilmore, Captain, Lloyd Dinkelspiel, Ralph Myers, with Richard Leuschner or Jack Bradley at back.

The womens' polo game will be played between San Mateo and Mrs. Demming Wheeler's team from Santa Cruz. It is hoped that Miss Marion Hollins will be back from the East in time to play for the Santa Cruz team. The San Mateo group will be Mrs. Warren Hellman, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Beth Berl Adames, with another player to be announced later.

Both games will be played on Sunday afternoon, October 13, in the infield of the Bay Meadows race track beginning at 2 o'clock.

SAN FRANCISCAN EXPIRES SUDDENLY

Mrs. Louise M. Ross of 32 Santa Cruz avenue, San Francisco, passed away suddenly in her home last Saturday, the victime of a heart attack.

Deceased is survived by her husband, Shirley Ross (a brother of City Clerk, B. C. Ross).

The funeral took place from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon of this week.

Interment was in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

PUBLISHERS OF COUNTY IN MEET

George Dunn, publisher of the Half Moon Bay Review, was host at a dinner and the regular monthly meeting of the San Mateo County Press association, of Half Moon Bay Monday evening of this week.

After the meeting, the publishers were guests of the Half Moon Bay Lions club, participating in an evening of entertainment and dancing.

The publishers and guests who attended were A. B. Cargill, Burlingame Advance-Star; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pitschke, Daly City Record; Mr. and Mrs Harry Elston, San Bruno Recorder; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Winklebleck, Redwood City Tribune; Hiram Cook, San Carlos Enquirer; Miss Anne Frahm, San Mateo Times; Charles Prior, Burlingame Advance-Star; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, San Mateo Times; Mr. and Mrs. George Dunn and daughter, Half Moon Bay Review; Edwin Wilder, San Francisco manager of the California Newspaper Publishers' association; E. L. Long and Nathan Addis of Los Angeles.

The next meeting of the county press association will be held in Burlingame November 4.

PIONEER RESIDENT DIES IN HOSPITAL

Following a brief illness of several weeks in the Villa Sanitarium, Mrs. Mattie Toy of Liebig street, a pioneer resident passed away last Saturday.

The deceased is survived by two children, Edward and Julia Toy. She was the widow of the late Daniel H. Toy, and mother of the late William Toy.

The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell, Tuesday morning of this week, at 8:45 o'clock. Thence to Our Lady of Perpetual church, where a mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery.

WOMEN'S CLUB COSTUME PARTY

The Daly City Women's Civic Club will hold a Costume Party at their next meeting, Thursday evening, October 17, at 408 Winchester street.

All members have been asked to be sure and come in costume.

OUR OWN RUTH LINDORFF TO RULE COUNTY FLORAL FIESTA

Daly City girl wins county-wide contest for ruler of County Products and Floral Fiesta at Bay Meadows, beginning today for a three day stand. She will be crowned tonight. Seven other girls who were contestants will comprise her court of honor.

ENTRANT FROM DALY CITY WINS HONOR OF FIESTA

Is Easy Victor Over Other Contestants In Race To Become Queen Flora

Long live our own "Queen Flora!"

She is none other than our own Ruth Lindorff, Daly City entrant in the County Products and Floral Fiesta ruler contest.

Miss Lindorff is a beautiful young lady of 18 summers with a personality 100 plus. She has worked untiringly for a number of weeks to secure enough votes to assure her selection to the honor of presiding as ruler of San Mateo County's greatest show.

The winner amassed more than twice the number of votes as her nearest rival. Ruth polled a total of 122,190 ballots, while the Burlingame entrant, Miss Virginia Seager, received 52,290.

Following are the young ladies who were elected as district queens and who will comprise Queen Flora's court:

Barbara Hardy, South San Francisco.
Virginia Seager, Burlingame.
Irene Williams, San Mateo.
Adeline DeWolfe, San Carlos.
Bertha Bergman, Redwood City.
Alyce Cross, East Palo Alto.
Irene Torre, Half Moon Bay.

In addition to ruling as Queen Flora at the fiesta, which opens tonight, Friday, at Bay Meadows. Miss Lindorff will receive a diamond ring and a trip to San Diego.

The district queens will accompany her on the San Diego trip.

HAVE A LOOK AT FIRST PRIZE

Sometimes a contest brings out a hidden talent that we didn't know was ours and opens the way for a successful career along that particular line of thought—something that we enjoy doing and can accomplish better than anything else.

Now remember, story writers, select a subject that is interesting to you, and what you write, whether truth or fiction, will be enjoyed by every reader of the Daly City Record, for the best ones are to be printed in the paper.

The prizes, too, are worth working hard for. The first prize will be a genuine leather, two compartment brief case, that will go with you on through high school. Next week, you'll learn something more about this first prize,, you'll like it even better then, and you'll want more than ever before to be a winner.

There are other prizes, too, so if you don't win first, you still have a chance—and The Record will soon be telling you about them.

FASTEST FILLIES ARE ENTERED IN LASSIE STAKES

Outstanding Youngsters Of West Will Make Colorful Field At Saturday Event

The West's fastest fillies will clash here Saturday (tomorrow) in the first running of the $5000 added Lassie Stakes. The engagement, fashioned for California-bred 2-year-olds at six furlongs, will bring out a flashy field.

J. W. Marchbank, directing owner of Tanforan, incorporated this fixture on the stake schedule to stimulate the breeding of fine thoroughbreds in California. Mr. Marchbank, who is master of Heather Farm at Walnut Creek, has done much to aid breeding in California, going into it, in fact, when the prospects for the return of the sport were dim.

The array of youngsters being tuned up for the encounter Saturday is a sparkling one, containing the names of the best fillies seen in recent years in western racing.

Outstanding misses include: Totness, a real flyer from the Pasadena Stable; Maid of Perth, a sensational youngster; Orra, Lady Florsie, and Cantrip, clever stablemates of "The Maid;" Blaze Home, which just returned from a Detroit campaign and was shipped here especially for this event; Fresno, star filly of the Northwest this summer; Berenda, which undoubtedly will help force the pace; Shasta Banner, reliance of Norman W. Church; Charming Miss, Doraldina, Cluair, Fair Polly, Thenar, Mattie Hauser, Tritoma, Merced Queen, Stockton Girl, Lady Rap, Bly Conard. Heroakel Conard, Sue Grafton, Becky Lou, Shasta Palm, Stardom, Miss Waco, Take It Easy, and Cloud's Gift.

CONTEST WINNER THANKS FRIENDS

Ruth Mildred Lindorf wishes to extend her deep appreciation and thanks for the kindness that has been given her since she entered the contest for queen of the San Mateo Floral Fiesta.

She was successful and believes she owes this victory to the many friends who so ably assisted her from start to finish.

She especially wants to thank her manager, Mr. P. C. Morgan Sr., for the way he conducted this campaign. She also desires to thank Mr. Jim Callan, the Veteran Firemen, the City Council, the American Legion and our most sincere friend, Mr. Pitschke of the Daly City Record.

The Veteran Firemens Association was the first organization in Daly City to endorse Miss Lindorff in her contest for Queen Flora.

STRONG APPEAL MADE FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

There is music in the affairs of men which one may take one's part in or which one may spoil—Plato.

Of moment to all believers in the new social order that is bound to come was an address recently by Right Rev. R. Marcellus Wagner of Cinnati, president of the Natianl Conference of Catholic Charities. The speaker pointed out in unequivocal terms that citizens see that everything that is received ought to be looked upon in relation to its social usefulness for the entire body politic.

A few words of Monsignor Wagner: "We have permitted people to take things that belong to others. We join in the empty cry of social justice without imposing and living a social justice. Greed and power have turned the heads of millions."

President Roosevelt's security program is along this line.

Conditions are reported better in the pioneer lead-silver district up north, that of Slocan. Quite a number have been increasing the amounts in their shipments to the smelter at Trail. The Noble Five, near Sandon, recently made its first shipment of lead-silver concentrate since resumption of activities.

Switzerland holds thte highest per capita stock of silver in banks and treasury at $9.15, according to a summary review of the siver mining industry by the Dominion of Canada Bureau of Statistics. Iraq came next with $7.60 per head; United States, $6.75; Great Britain, $5.64; Spain, $5.27; Venezula, $5.02; Germany, $4.98; Latvia, $4.32; British India, $3.90; Mexico, $3.66; and Canada, $2.71.

A suggestion has been made by several interested parties that a memorial be erected in honor of the pioneers of Alaska. In order to obviate the raising of funds by popular subscription to defray the cost of the memorial, it is said money now in the hands of the board of trustees of the Pioneers Home at Sitka could be used for the purpose.

Good looking placer properties are being developed in the Ahtell section of the Copper River Valley district. On one of the properties there has been some active mining this year with small hydraulic pipe. A definite paystreak is said to have been located. Gold, silver and copper nuggets have been recovered. Some of the gold is formed in delicate and fragile specimens, showing it has not traveled far from its source. It may be the placers will develop into a big dredge or hydraulic proposition. Some of the miners are looking for financial backing for development purposes.

BEWITCHES HERO AFTER LONG WAIT

Dramatization Of Haggard Story Proves Wonderfully Interesting

The idea of living a year without the affections of some one, or at least something upon which to bestow love, is an unhappy prospect. But think of living for five hundred years without giving or receiving love. That was the lot of the most intriguing woman of fiction.

H. Rider Haggard, wrote a story about her fifty years ago that has intrigued millions of readers. RKO Radio's "SHE," founded on this story, is coming to the Daly City Theater, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 14, 15 and 16.

"SHE" was a beautiful woman who discovered and bathed in a flame of eternal life. She ruled over the Kingdom of Kor, lush tropical country locked away from the world by towering mountains of glacial ice. A scientist and his wife, exploring uncharted ice wastes, penetrated the mountain barrier and learned the secret of the goddess queen. She fell in love with the man and he, returned her affection. When it came to a final reckoning, however, he refused to give up his wife. The queen, in a jealous rage, killed him. The wife escaped and, after enduring horrible suffering, managed to reach civilization and tell the story which no one believed.

The legend came down through the centuries that followed.

Helen Gahagan, star of the theater and opera, plays the immortal "SHE" who learned that passion, power and beauty are but bubbles when compared to home, fireside and a normal span of years with true love. Randolph Scott plays the young explorer who rediscovered Kor and the fountain of eternal life. Other leading members of the cast are Helen Mack and Nigel Bruce.

Special stage presentation, the original 3 Little Pigs in person. Friday and Saturday, October 11 and 12.

Added attraction "Murder in the Fleet" with Robert Taylor and Jean Parker.

Amateur Night, Sunday.

Ovenserve Night, Wednesday.

TANFORAN JOINS IN CELEBRATION OF FLOWER SHOW

Noted Sprinters From East Have Begun To Arrive At San Bruno Course

Joining San Mateo County in its first fiesta celebration, Tanforan today was ready for the running of the richest purse of its Autumn meeting, which opened at the San Bruno oval last week-end.

Tomorrow the Lassie Stakes for two-year-old fillies foaled in California, will bring some of the greatest horses at Tanforan to the post in the six-furlong competition for a $5,000 purse. This race is offered by the track as an outstanding feature of the county fiesta week-end, which will be in full swing toworrow. It will mark the important part this county holds in the California industry of thoroughbred breeding.

In addition to the fiesta attraction Tanforan has announced the presence of Azucar, outstanding American thoroughbred, and sensational winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. With Azucar came other noted mounts of the Frederick M. Alger Jr. stables in Detroit.

Azucar's first bid for a stake at Tanforan probably will come in the Golden Gate Handicap, over a mile and a sixteenth by three-year-olds and upward, November 2 for a purse of $2500. Meanwhile the former steeplechaser undoubtedly will be seen in other races, limbering up for the Golden Gate feature. Thousands will be eager to see a repitition of the famous Santa Anita victory.

Nearly 15,000 fans gathered at Tanforan for the Inaugural last week-end, and found the historic race course attired in new regalia. With marked improvements completed and gaily bedecked with flags, the track, with its enthusiastic throng, presented the most colorful spectacle Tanforan has witnessed in its long history. J. W. Marchbank, directing owner, is determined to attract America's greatest bluebloods of turfdom to the San Mateo County plant, by gradually increasing purses until the great stables of the East trek across the continent to match their finest with the best in the West. Azucar's coming indicates the trek has begun.

Tanforan is host to the ladies Wednesday and Friday of each week.

WHITE COLLAR WPA PROJECTS

On Monday the Board of Supervisors approved preparations to submit two WPA projects which will have a return of $47,000 in labor for "white collar" workers on relief, and at the same time be of considerable value to taxpayers.

They were prepared by the county planning commission technical staff, and okehed by the supervisors at their regular meeting.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach at once, from New York, takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. Other members include an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, Hal is directed to Barry's bedroom, instead of his own, and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She only answers that she mustn't love him. Crack brutally insults Kerrigan. Hal forces him to apologize abjectly. On his insistence, Barry tells Hal that, at her father's urging, she had married a man many years older than she, and had promised her father, on his deathbed, to stick to her husband, "no matter what happened," for ten yetrs. That was four years ago, and despite her knowledge of her husband's unworthiness, she is determined to keep her promise, though admitting her love for Hal. No argument he can make will move Barry. That night she begs him, in a note, not to insist on seeing her, as he has declared he will. He disregards her missive, and goes to her, in her room.

As he had expected it, he pushed the paper into his pocket, said good night to the clerk, and went upstairs. There was light around Barry's door and he knocked softly. He heard the bed creak, her deliberate footfalls come, her low, resigned voice admit she knew who was there even as she asked.

"Barry, you've got to come out," he said.

"Hal, no," she said, gently pleading.

"Then I'll come in." He pushed the door, and as if she had expected that too, he felt her weight against it.

"Don't, Hal," she said, less surely; "for the love of heaven, please don't. I'll come out to you—for five minutes."

"No," said Hal. "If you come out, there'll be no conditions. And if you don't come out, I come in."

"Hal, I'm tired; I've got a headache—please, oh, please, my darling."

"You haven't a headache, and you'll forget you're tired, Barry, I'm serious as death, as sin, as happiness; if you won't come to me, I'll come to you. Do you understand that?"

He waited a few seconds for her to speak again; then he pushed the door against her strength until she dropped back from it and he stood inside, closing it behind him. There was no key, nor any eye for the bolt to engage, so he left it and faced her.

She turned from him as if the room had grown too small, murmuring, "Dear G—d, if you haven't given me a way to keep him out, you must want him here."

Hal took her arm above the elbow and turned her to him, then held her other arm too and shook her once, gently, to stir the heavy-lidded study that held her eyes. "You believe there is God?" he said.

"If I do," she said, meeting his look steadily, "you don't know better than I what he wants of me."

Her chin was up bravely over where the parting of the little stiffened collar showed her white, firm throat; between the turbulent bushes where her golden hair ended, her cheeks drew a little inward to compose her full lips in their faintly pursed pride.

As he held her before him by the arms and looked into the living blue of her eyes—deeply strengthened against him, yet never blind to the wonder of what had occurred—there fell suddenly across his heart a bad shadow, as if somewhere a silent signal for hurry had been made. His voice sounded too slow, too undisciplined for his quickened purposes as he said to her: "Angel of heaven, it's nothing to tell you I'd die for you—is it. Love is as much as you said it was, so that all its old meanings have fallen away and I can speak it only to tell you I love you; and to say I love you so much I'd die for you is nothing more—is it."

His voice made no inquiry, but his eyes waited upon hers for the known answer. Her quiet golden head moved a little aside and back again, and her deep look gravely understood him.

"Barry, do you love me?"

She looked down at the mouth that had asked her that, then back at his eyes as her bare whisper said, "You know it: God forgive me for letting you."

"You'd never need to tell me you loved me so much you'd die for me—would you."

"No," she said.

'You'd mean me to know you would, just by saying you loved me—wouldn't you."

"Yes."

Without changing the composure of his tone he said: "But you won't shake off the wrong slavery of a spurious bargain with your father and with a man who has no claim upon you; you won't risk a little time of trouble in your conscience, of unrest in your disillusioned duty to a figure of love that had his best life in your own fancy as a child; you'd die for me, but you won't do this other, won't even willingly listen to me tell you why you must, how you can."

She looked at him, the dark awe of alarm taking her eyes more deeply: she said nothing. But under the very heart of her look, he saw a shining, liquid fullness that had come so slowly she herself might not have felt it. And before the tears could form, he had her—warm and mortal—in his arms.

"That's it," he whispered, feeling her soft cheek wet against his. "You cry, and when you're cool and calm again, I'll show you the simple, honorable, little things that are all we need to do to have the world—to ourselves, for always."

She shook her head against his shoulder, but not, Hal triumphantly felt, with the same stubborn conviction.

Clear footfalls ringing on the sidewalk opposite reminded Hal that the lighted room must be in plain view of anyone who cared to look at the windows. But one of the shades wouldn't stay down; so, back at the door, he cursed the impossibility of locking it, and turned out the light.

The glow of the street against the ceiling showed the meager furniture, and Barry waiting for him. He went to her.

"It can't happen—ever," she said, as if to herself. "And you must go away, in a minute—soon, before—oh, God help me, my darling."

Her good lips turned quickly to his. He held her close—her whole, surrendered loveliness living against him; it was as if she gave the best treasures of her life to the keeping of his exultant body, as if their nearness found its way of growth to inseparable communion, miraculous and destined both. She would forget he must go; and he knew he must not.

A quick, single creak was all the warning that came from the hall, bringing Hal to a sense of time elapsed, to sharp, premonitory alertness. Doc's ugly growl was begun as the door-latch clicked; it broke into a sharp bark at the sound of a step in the room; and the door crisply closed again. A key scraped metal, found the keyhole, and turned the lock over, plucked smartly out again. Then the snap of the switch put light in the frugal room, and Hal was looking into Martin Crack's light-blue eyes, their lazy, private smiling harassed by a ratlish intensity, as of hate and fear and triumph all together. Only his voice was still drowsy as he said, "I kinda thought it'd be tonight."

For a moment Hal was afraid that the bursting of hot poisons in him must blind him, gag him, nauseate him beyond any power to act.

"You little snooping son of a—cat!" he said, the heavy savagery of his voice somehow saved from trembling. "What're you doing here?"

Indolently Crack's hand slipped into his side pocket: Hal knew the sight of that evil little golf ball would snap the last shackle on his control; but Crack drew out a stubby double-derringer to point at him, and a small, preposterous agent of reason remaining in Hal noted how that old-fashioned weapon suited Crack's old-fashioned tidiness.

"You guess what I'm doin'," said Crack in sly, almost sensual mischief.

The bed creaked. Hal became aware of his arms, hanging down beside him, drained of certainty, ready to tremble, as after great effort. Then the physical revulsion under his fury abruptly choked itself, left him to a numb, miserable disgust, a tainted exhaustion of blood that would pass for calm. And in it there throbbed only one sure emotion to command such faculties as were undrugged—hatred of Crack, steady and uncomplicated, seeming to live independent of Crack's hate of him, Crack's private gloating in his degradation. Hal heard his own voice quiet and careless in contempt as he nodded at the derringer: "You don't need that d—n silly thing."

Crack put it away, brief embarrassment bringing some of the drowsiness back to his eyes. "Thought you'd prob'ly be sensible," he said.

"You did," said Hal drily. "And what's there to be sensible about?" The small check in Crack's return to basking satisfaction did Hal good.

Hal looked at Barry. She sat on the edge of the bed, knees drawn up, legs tightly encircled by her arms, golden head a little bowed over her dark, sullen stare at the washstand in the corner.

"Well," said Crack, with a sort of sly modesty in achievement: "we can use dough an' we can use publicity. You got the say which."

"You'll have a h—l of a time getting money," Hal said out of his listless calm, "so shoot on the other, if you think it'll get you anywhere."

"I guess it'll get us somewheres all right," said Crack. "But I figgered Mr. Frederick Ireland'd sooner make it dough, if you wouldn't."

By G—d, what a dirty trick on the Old Man, getting him into a mess like this! . . . Shame like an instant of fright, held Hal's veins and made his lungs seem to shrink. Providence, you Ireland: Providence! Let a narrow, white bug leer at you in the rotten trap you walked into, and leave Providence to take care of the Old Man. Christmas! Leave Providence to take care of your hate, too. Look at Martin Crack, named for a saint, no doubt—look at him sitting there, a venomous lackey of evil: don't fight him, don't match your pristine wits against his basking viciousness, don't disturb your fine, wounded spirit now that the first fury is out of you.

Hal thanked God his revolted calm had stayed steady upon him till he saw what he must do. He could stall, somehow, for another day, until patient Sister Anastasia was delivered at her sorry destination; and in Los Angeles, a free agent, he would be his father's—his own Providence in this. In the room of a city hotel, alone with Crack, he might remember those immense, riven compositions in defiance through which they had minutely traveled, scenes in which it did not matter what happened to a man.

And while these flashing things tumbled past Hal's bitter attention, he said quietly, "If it interests you what Frederick Ireland would think, I'd ask him."

"You know him better'n I do," said Crack. "What do you figger he'll think?"

"How well do you know him?"

"Don't know him," said Crack; "but you'd ought to. You're his son, aren't you."

"Is that a statement?" Hal asked. "Or a request for information."

"Don't seem like you were exactly denyin' it."

"No," said Hal, "I don't remember having denied it, since I've known you."

He glanced at Barry as he reached for a cigarette. She hadn't stirred.

"You're Ireland's son," Crack said. "Frederick—the big whack."

"Sure," said Hal confidently.

"And you got no idea what he'll think when he hears you been caught in a married woman's room by her husband."

"If I told you what you didn't like, you wouldn't believe it," said Hal, as if Crack were being a little dull-witted about it.

The shy smile slipped over Crack's fair-skinned face again, and he said, "Look, Ireland, we don't want to get you in a lotta trouble." A hot swirling under Hal's composure made him hold himself hard; in Los Angeles, in the room alone with Crack, he would remember that "we."

"Well?" said Hal, "S'pose you don't."

"Here's the thing," Crack said: "if you'll talk dough, the whole works stops right here in this room—between the three of us. If you won't, we gotta go to Uncle Frederick. An' after that, it's court an' the newspapers."

"That's a program anyway," said Hal. "Push item number one off, and go to Mr. Ireland. Is that all you want to know?"

"Don't you wanta save yourself trouble?"

"Yes, you bet," said Hal, and the casual readiness of his own voice fortified him. "But I don't see any trouble."

"You don't," said Crack. "You don't wanna stop this right here?"

Hal welcomed with vicious pleasure the undertone of impatience. He said, "By paying you money?"

"Yes."

Hal puffed the fragment of a laugh through his nose and said, "Wouldn't pay you a nickel even if it meant anything to me."

"Maybe you don't think I know you're Ireland's son," said Crack, his voice breaking peevishly as he raised it.

"I haven't denied it yet," said Hal. "Anyone'd think you didn't want to go ahead with this."

Crack watched him again and liked it less. The cunning in his eyes tried for a space of minutes to challenge Hal's unworried look, then suddenly the peevishness blew to a hot ember of malice, hissing in his words like a coal settling through snow: "By G—d! if all this is wasted, I'll—" With one unguarded look of sweating hatred of Hal, he jerked a pencil and a telegraph form from his pocket and went to the bureau, elbows out, to write quickly at a message.

Muscle Bound

Several conditions are described by the term muscle bound, but perhaps the commonest is that by which muscles, through constant practice, are trained to oppose one another rather than to act together in efficient work. Thus, when a muscle is called into play involuntarily its opponent also contracts and the result is less efficient action. The condition can obviously be altered first by rest and then more efficient training of the muscles.

CONSUMPTION OF FATS

The total factory consumption of all animal and vegetable fats and oils in this country last year amounted to 3,355,555,000 pounds. More than one third, 1,375,416,000 pounds went into soap manufacture. Compounds and vegetable shortenings came next, and paint and varnish third. As might be expected, the largest single item was cottonseed oil, 1,083,959,000 pounds. Next in order of large items were: Edible tallow, 585,896,000 pounds; coconut oil, 549,515,000; linseed oil, 219,746,000; palm oil, 208,547,000.

Calumet Baking Powder is selling at New Low Prices

"No more 'by-guess-and-by-golly' baking!"

Says Mrs. Owen H. Fleming, of 1235 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill.

MRS. FLEMING, of Evanston, Ill., was one of the first to hear the grand news: All Calumet prices are lower!

"No need for any woman to take chances with her baking now," says Mrs. Fleming. "Now that Calumet's selling for the lowest prices in its history, it means that the very best can be bought at a bargain."

Ask your grocer for Calumet!

A SIMPLE TWIST... and the Easy-Off top lifts off. No spilling, no broken finger-nails!

WHY DOES CALUMET give such astonishing "baking luck"? Why is Calumet different from other baking powders? Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl. A slower one for the oven... And Calumet's famous double action is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening—every time.

Now! Big New 10¢ Can... Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder, comes in two convenient sizes. The new-size can is yours for a dime... the regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25¢.

Prosperity, Culture, Happiness

It was a neat and enlightening picture that Dr. Andre Siegfried drew of Europe before the Canadian Club yesterday in his scholarly comparison of that continent and North America.

Europe, as he pointed out, has between thirty and forty nations with a handicap of too many races, too many languages, too many classes and too many hatreds.

Moreover, Europe, in an earlier generation the world leader in industry and trade, has got herself squeezed between the low wages of the Orient, with consequent cheap goods, and the high wages of America which have induced mass production.

Thus, Europe has lost her industrial leadership, even though she is still the home of high-quality goods.

Dr. Siegfried admitted that the centre of world gravity was shifted from Europe in a material way.

But Europe, as he impressed it, still leads in culture. She still is the centre of civilzation.

Dr. Siegfried made an important point when he contrasted the sharp difference between a high standard of living, as prevails in North America, and a high standard of culture as prevails in Europe.

Different again are standards of happiness, and here Europe must again rest on her culture.

It left Canadians with the feeling that here in North America, with our three nations, as contrasted with Europe's thirty, without Europe's prejudices and with rich industrial potentialities, this continent, when it does acquire an inevitable culture, will fall heir to an even greater era of leadership than Europe could ever boast.—Van Couver Sun.

NATIONAL PARKS OF WEST VISITED BY MORE TOURISTS

Substantial gains in the numbers of visitors to 15 national parks in nine Far Western states indicate an encouraging increase in tourist business, Bank of America reports.

According to official reports, the volume of tourist travel to Western national parks in the first ten months of the 1935 season was 11.3 per cent ahead of 1934 and 51 per cent ahead of 1933, it is stated in the Bank of America Business Review.

Approximately 1,420,000 visited the Western National Parks during the first ten months of the current season, against 1,276,000 during the like period of 1934 and 940,679 in 1933.

General Grant National Park in California showed the greatest percentage gain of tourists this year over the average of the preceding two years, with a 67 per cent increase. Grand Canyon, in Arizona was second, with a gain of 62 per cent. Zion National Park in Utah ranked third, with an increase of almost 59 per cent.

Ten of the fifteen reporting Western National Parks showed gains in numbers of visitors this year compared with 1934. In comparison with 1933, all parks gained in tourists this year.

California is saving taxpayers $162,227.32 on motor vehicle license plates contracted for in 1936 and 1937.

California registered 6,428 pleasure motor vehicles in 1906. August 1, 1935, the state had registered 1,899,109 pleasure cars.

Question: What is taxidermy?

Answer: The science by which animals are preserved in lifelike manner. The visitor in a zoological museum is usually impressed by the natural appearance of the mounted animals exhibited. Often these are shown much as they lived in their native haunts; that is, in a picturesque setting of woods or water. Wild creatures, from the smallest bird to the lumbering elephant, all appear lifelike when mounted by a skillful taxidermist.

Taxidermy is a complicated art which requires considerable knowledge of anatomy, natural history, drawing, modeling, carving, sculpture, mechanics, tanning and dyeing. Ward's Natural Science Institute at Rochester, New York, is the most famous taxidermic school in the United States and most of the American museum experts have been graduated from this institution.

The complete process of mounting, in general, covers accurate measurements of the skin and drawings which show location of muscles, ribs and hollows. This copy is used as a guide. Next a model, corresponding to the body of the animal, is constructed by covering a framework of wire and excelsior with clay, plaster or papermache. The modeling of such a manikin must be done as carefully as if making a sculptor's model. By means of a special method of cutting the skin is removed from the body, even to the tips of the ears and the toes, so that there will be no disfigurement to fur, hair, feathers, or scales, as the case may be. The skin is then treated with a preservative compound, such as arsenical soap. Finally the skin is fitted over the figure and is sewed together carefully, where slits were made in stripping it from the body. Glass eyes are no longer used. They have been replaced by hollow globes, painted so as to give a natural expression.

An excellent taxidermic department is maintained by the United States National Museum, at Washington.

PISTON SLAP

A loose piston, resulting in what is called piston slap, is always more noticeable when the engine is operating under a heavy load, such as climbing a grade.

OLD STAMP MILL RUNS AT PROFIT

Wilcox Plant, White Horse Creek, Among First In Nelson Area District

(By Sidney Norman)

Though the writer has known the Ymir district for over 30 years, he recently made his first visit to the Wilcox mine, two miles above the north fork of Wild Horse Creek, four miles above the new plant of Ymir Consolidated at the Ymir mine and about seven miles east of Ymir town.

This is one of the first, if not the first, property operated in the vicinity, location dating back to 1896, its first owners being Phil White and Steve Bywater, a well-known railroad conductor of Spokane.

In 1898, about coincident with construction of the first Ymir mill of 80 stamps, it was equipped with a four stamp mill, reported to have saved but 70 per cent of values.

The only other plant in the Nelson area at that time was the stamp mill erected at Granite Poorman, five miles below Nelson on the Kootenay River.

This first four-stamp mill was later set up at Kootenay Belle on Sheep Creek.

In 1902 the first plant was supplanted by a ten-stamp mill and, tended carefully and efficiently by four working partners and their seven employees, that old plant is now turning out profit and with a saving of around 85 per cent grinding to 50 mesh.

This, it will be admitted, is a pretty fair record for a plant 33 years old, especially considering the improvements that have been made in recent metallurgical machinery.

David Norcross, one of the owners, is authority for the statement that about 70 per cent of recoverable values are in free gold and the balance extractable by concentration. Heads average around $16 a ton, present gold price, so that the saving is approximately $13.60 per ton.

The other partners in the syndicate are J. J. and J. A. Cullman and Frank Moline. They hold the property under lease from the owners, represented by W. S. Mason, formerly of Chicago, now of Pasadena, California, and have been operating it for the past four years with success. This year the lease was renewed for another five years.

When the present plant was erected in 1902 it was connected with the mine by a 2350-foot tramway, the whole being run by 75 horsepower hydro-electric plant actuated by Pelton wheel, with water supply, from Avalanche and Rapid Creeks, brought to the wheel in flumes 2600 feet long and pipline of 1400 feet, under 640-foot head.

The first run was started in May, 1903, and in the next six months $22,000 was recovered. The mine was sold to United States interests in 1903, but the new company, known as Broken Hill Mining & Development Co. soon went into liquidation. Operations were resumed in the following year and intermitted work continued until 1911.

Property was taken over by the present owners in the latter year and Arthur Lakes, M. E., placed in charge. Operations were continued until after the outbreak of war, when scarce labor and high supply costs forced suspension. Since then it has only been worked under lease.

Up 'till 1914, production had been over $85,000, so that total production to this date should be well over $250,000.

Mill equipment includes the ten stamps, plates, jigs, and two Wilfley tables. Concentrate from the jigs and amalgam from the plates is treated in amalgam barrel of home make.

Incidentally, an 18 pound brick was shipped on July 15, a few days before the writer's visit, containing 251 ounces gold, 469 fine and, 475 ounces silver, worth about $4200.

There are three main veins upon the property, which consists of five lcaims and millsite. All are of the fissure type in granodiorite and known as Fourth-of-July, Willcock and Little Willcock.

Fourth-of-July vein, averaging from 18 to 24 inches wide, has been developed by five levels, the lower two of which are caved and not now in use. Operations are confined to this vein through levels No. 2 and No. 3, the latter of which is in about 800 feet. Air is supplied by 175 cubic foot Blaisdell compressor.

No details as to production are obtainable, since it is wholly a private venture, but it is believed profit of between $15,000 and $20,000 is being divided annually by the four syndicate partners, after payment of all expenses.

Canada Eases Radio Entry

The Dominion Government of Canada has put through a new ruling which eliminates the necessity for putting up a bond covering the entry of radios, it is reported.

Under the new ruling it will be necessary only to report the radio and give the manufacturer's name, serial number and valuation. Both bond and cash deposit are eliminated by this procedure. This also applies to portable typewriters.

DRUNK DRIVING LAW GIVEN FORCE

In fewer cases will persons arrested for driving while drunk escape punishment and legal machinery will be able to cope with the offense with more general success than in the past, as a result of amendments to the law which recently went into effect. This is the belief held by enforcement officers and judges and traffic safety leaders who advocated changes in the drunk driving law which were adopted at the last session of the legislature.

Greater certainty of conviction and punishment is expected to bring about a distinct improvement in the intoxicated driver situation, regarded as one of the most serious traffic safety problems of the day.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

In all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, October 13, 1935, on the subject "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?"

The Golden Text will be: "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him"(James 5:15). Bible selections will include the following passage from Rev. 21:4: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "The very circumstance, which your suffering sense deems wrathful and afflictive, Love can make an angel entertained unawares. Then thought gently whispers: "Come hither! Arise from your false consciousness into the true sense of Love, and behold the Lamb's wife,—Love wedded to its own spiritual idea.' Then cometh the marriage feast, for this revelation will destroy forever the physical plagues imposed by material sense" (p. 574).

NEW LIGHTING RULES PROTECT MOTORISTS

Recognizing that safety in night driving depends largely upon the effectiveness of lighting equipment on motor vehicles, the last session of the Legislature enacted several changes in the law and these are now in effect. While the principal changes deal with lights on commercial vehicles, and hence do not directly affect the average motorist and his car, they are of vital importance to the motoring public because of the additional safety that is provided.

Francis Carr of Redding, a member of the Legislative Committee of the California State Automobile Association, voiced this comment in a statement reviewing the new lighting laws.

FLEXIBLE SPRINGS

Springs which are so flexible that they permit the car frame to strike the axle should be removed and reset.

Unless such springs are corrected they may cause damage to the chassis.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

If a rope is available use it in the same manner, but do not attempt to slide down it without protecting the hands with a towel or piece of bedding or clothing. Grasp the rope firmly in both hands, twist it once around the right leg, then place it between the feet, keeping them close together and slide slowly.

Familiarize each member of your family with the location of the nearest alarm box. If you are not sure how it operates, make it your business to find out. Many a fire has gained a disastrous headway through the ignorance of the person sent to turn in the alarm. After operating a fire alarm box stay at the box to direct the firemen, for if the fire is inside valuable time is lost while they are searching for it. If you must use the phone to give an alarm do not lose time looking in the book, but ask central to give you the Daly City police department. Be sure and give the name of street and what streets the fire is between. Excited persons frequently make calls and just say their house is on fire and hang up; a call like this is worse than none at all. Be sure to make the location of fire clear to the party you are talking to. The local fire department would much rather have you turn in the alarm through the alarm box, as a great deal of time can be lost sending by phone.

10-Hour Bible Conference In Presbyterian Church

Ten hours in Church! That is what Grace Presbyterian is going to Sunday, October 13. Beginning at 9:30 a. m., there will be Sunday School. Then 11 o'clock churchservice; Pot-luck lunch, 12:30; Christian Worker's Forum, 2 p. m.; afternoon song service, 3 p. m.; Biblical Forum, 4 p. m.; Twilight Reveries, 5 p. m.; Pot-luck Supper, 5:30 p. m.; Young People's meeting, 6:30 p. m.; Closing Inspirational service, 7:30 p. m.

The whole of the services will be in charge of the East Bay Evangelistic Union and a splendid group of young people will conduct song services.

The people of the community are invited to come whenever they can and leave at any time it is necessary. Come and learn to sing some of the new Gospel Choruses which everyone is singing. All are welcome, young people, children and adults at all the services.

AUTO SALESMAN HAS NOSE BROKEN

While umpiring a baseball game at a jamboree given by Chevrolet Motor Company at Mt. Diablo Country Club recently, Pat King of Crocker avenue had the misfortune of colliding with batter who was running to first base.

The impact caused Mr. King also to collide with the first baseman. Both men were taken to the hospital in an unconscious condition. There it was found that Mr. King's nose was badly broken and the first baseman's left leg was broken.

Plant Trees for Erosion Control

Nurseries Have Enormous Task in Providing Necessary Material.

Approximately 600,000,000 trees and shrubs will be produced by nurseries of the soil conservation service and co-operating agencies for use on erosion control demonstration projects throughout the country the coming year, Charles R. Enlow, chief of the division of nurseries of the service, announced.

The nursery program also calls for collection of 1,000,000 pounds of grass seed not commercially available, to be used in erosion control planting.

To meet this heavy production assignment, 19 new nurseries will be established bringing the total number of service nurseries to 83, in 38 states. They now range in size from two acres to 800 acres, with the average about 50 acres.

Fifteen of these nurseries are under suprvision of Emergency Conservation work and were established primarily to provide materials for use by the 545 Civilian Conservation corps camps under direction of the service. Certain other nursery areas providing trees for the service are operated in co-operation with state foresters.

The mounting demand for trees shrubs and grasses has been occasioned by the recent expansion in the demonstration program of the service, which increased the number of demonstration projects from 47 in 31 states, to 141 in 41 states, and the number of CCC camps from 55 to 545.

A large share of the 600,000,000 trees and shrubs will be used in the reforestation and aforestation phases of federal erosion control work on farm and grazing lands. Under the soil conservation program, areas too steep or otherwise unsuited for practical cultivation are taken out of crop production and planted in trees and shrubs to prevent erosion by wind and water. In many instances, shrubs and vines are used in the control of gullies. When planted on gully banks, they anchor the soil and prevent it from washing away. When used on lands subject to wind erosion, trees and shrubs serve a double purpose by anchoring the soil and by breaking the sweep of wind. They also slow up runoff of rain water.

The 1,000,000 pounds of grass seed will be used to plant cover on certain lands retired from cultivation under the erosion control program. Like trees, grass anchors the soil and prevents it from being washed away by rain or blown away by wind.

Grass seed will be collected from 25 species of native grasses not produced commercially.

Sparrows Save Man's Life

Sparrows have saved the life of a man who long befriended them at Galbrunn, Austria. Franze Oberhuber, seventy-five years old, a peasant and a bachelor, made it a habit every morning during 20 years to feed from his window the sparrows that came regularly in masses for their meal. One morning the window was closed and there was no food for them. The noise made by several thousand birds attracted the attention of neighbors, who entered the house and found the old man unconscious in his bed. He had fallen seriously ill during the night and had nobody to help him.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Every day, unthinkingly, mothers take the advice of unqualified persons — instead of their doctor's — on remedies for their child.

Doctors Say PHILLIPS' For Your Child

When it comes to the frequently-used "milk of magnesia," doctors, for over 50 years, have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia — the safe remedy for your child."

Remember this — And Always Say "Phillips'" When You Buy. Your child deserves it; for your own peace of mind, see that you get it — Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Also in Tablet Form:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

DEER HUNTER HAS MUCH HARD LUCK

T. J. Larimee of Cavour street spent many week ends this summer deer hunting in the wilds of Mendocino County, but never had the good luck to bag a buck. On his last trip he returned without any game as usual, but alas he was minus his fine leather sport jacket, lost somewhere in that vast area.

Cheer up, Larimee, maybe the 1936 season will bring you better luck.
